UD in the news Dec. 20-Jan. 3

National news program CBS 'Sunday Morning' on Dec. 22 highlighted the University of Dayton Marian Library's Nativities exhibit

National Catholic online outlet Crux and WXXA-TV in Albany, New York, also featured the Nativities in stories.

Vince Miller, Gudorf Chair in Catholic Theology and Culture, contributed an editorial to Commonweal about "Laudato Si'". Also in religious studies, The Daily Beast interviewed Meghan Henning about Mary, mother of Jesus, and her relationship with Hell, and Jana Bennett wrote "Deaf Christians often struggle to hear God's word, but some find meaning in the richness of who they are" for The Conversation.

Political scientist Dan Birdsong wrote about how state polls will factor into Election 2020 for The Conversation and The Associated Press quoted colleague Nancy Miller in a story about Dayton mayor and UD alumna Nan Whaley's response to local tragedies in 2019. At least 300 outlets picked up the AP story.

The School of Law received nice publicity for its recent successes on the front page of the Dayton Daily News local section and its mission to support minority students in Grit Daily News.

A FedScoop story quoted a 2018 University of Dayton study that found members of Generation Z have more confidence in institutions to protect their privacy than millennials.

WGVU-FM in Grand Rapids, Michigan, conducted a two-part interview with communication department chair Joe Valenzano about "How divine realities are explored in current pop culture and media."
